

An Activation Summit for Women Lawyers (and Their Friends and Allies)

Agenda

February 11, 2026

10:00 AM Registration

10:15 AM Welcome – Hawaii Supreme Court Acting Chief Justice Sabrina Shizue McKenna
The Vision for the Activation Summit for Women Lawyers (and Their Friends and Allies) – Judy Lam

10:30 AM Who’s Going to Law School? Talent Management to Motivate the Next Generation of Lawyers

Law student demographics are changing and with it, their intentions, expectations, and ambitions. Using the newly available data about the entering class of 2025 collected by the Law School Admission Council (“LSAC”), learn about what the data tells us about who these future lawyers are, why they are going to law school, and what they expect (and will perhaps demand) from the profession when they enter it. How might we anticipate their changing the legal profession?

- Elizabeth (Liz) Bodamer, Senior Director of Research, Law School Admission Council
- Pohai Campbell, Partner, Cades Schutte LLP
- Tryphena Liu, Epstein Becker & Green, P.C.
- Anna Lloyd, Executive Director, Chicago Committee on Minorities in Large Law Firms (Chicago)
- Camille A. Nelson, Dean, University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa, William S. Richardson School of Law

11:45 AM Lunch and Discussion

The First Fifteen

In 1998, Hon. Susan Oki Mollway (D. Haw.) became the first woman of Asian ancestry to join the ranks of the federal judiciary. It would be ten years before the second joined her. In The First Fifteen: How Asian American Women Became Federal Judges, Judge Mollway told the stories of the first fifteen Asian American women who became federal judges. Now, we sit down with Judge Mollway, and two of the other First Fifteen, Hon. Leslie Kobayashi (D. Haw.) and Hon Jill Aiko Otake (D. Haw.) to discuss what women lawyers in today’s climate can learn from these first fifteen trailblazers.

- Hon. Susan Oki Mollway
- Hon. Leslie Kobayashi
- Hon. Jill Aiko Otake
- Laura Maechtlen (Co-Moderator), Partner, Seyfarth Shaw LLP (San Francisco)
- Arleen Nand (Co-Moderator), Shareholder, Greenberg Traurig LLP (Minneapolis)

1:00 PM Break

1:15 PM The Brilliance of Women Lawyers Today

The National Association of Women Lawyers (“NAWL”) has been studying women lawyers and their careers as well as their employers for years. In this fireside chat, hear what we know about the status of and trends for women in law based upon NAWL’s research.

- Elizabeth Manno, Partner, Holland & Hart (Denver)
- Courtney Worcester, Partner, Holland & Knight (Boston)
- Michelle Correia (Moderator), Partner, Chun Kerr LLP (Honolulu)

2:15 PM Break

2:30 PM Women Lawyers: Leading Teams and Lifting All Boats – How are Women Lawyers Making It Rain?

With many corporate clients feeling less comfortable actively seeking greater diversity among their outside counsel, how has the climate for business development changed for lawyers who are women, people of color, openly LGBTQ+, or part of other underrepresented and marginalized groups? We know they are excellent lawyers. How do they and their law firms make sure that current and potential clients know it, too? And, how can clients find them?

- Kim Hughes, Senior Corporate Counsel, Microsoft (Redmond)
- Kimi Ide-Foster, Partner, Chun Kerr LLP (Honolulu)
- Arleen Nand (Moderator), Shareholder, Greenberg Traurig LLP (Minneapolis)
- Others to be announced

3:30 PM Day 1 Closing Comments

8:15 AM Greetings

8:30 AM Bar Leaders in a Time of Challenge

Some lawyers gravitate to active participation in bar associations. Some do not. The reasons are myriad. In recent years, other types of not-for-profit organizations as well as for-profit businesses have evolved and taken on many of the kinds of roles and activities that were traditionally in the purview of bar associations. But last year, when the rule of law was challenged, many bar associations leaned into their traditional role as the non-partisan voice of the legal profession and made public statements and pronouncements. In organizations dealing with sometimes inefficient structures designed to foster greater opportunities for participation rather than streamlined efficiency; declining or burgeoning memberships; unreliable sources of funding; uneven or unaligned leadership skills and experience; and sometimes bureaucracies and processes that are anything but nimble or flexible, it can sometimes be a challenge to maintain relevancy much less have any meaningful impact. How are bar leaders addressing these issues during a time of challenge. Is it different for national versus state or local bar associations? Is it different for mainstream versus affinity bar associations? What have we learned from the past? What opportunities might be developing? Are they prepared to seize them?

- Belinda Macauley (Moderator), Executive Director, Beverly Hills Bar Association (Los Angeles)
- Makalika Noholow'a, Past President, National Native American Bar Association (Honolulu)
- Alana Peacott-Ricardos, President, Hawaii Women Lawyers (Honolulu)
- Joan Toth, Executive Director, ChIPs (San Francisco)
- Others to be announced

9:30 AM Break

9:40 AM When Disaster Strikes!

When wildfires broke out on Maui in August, 2023, the rest of the world watched in horror and sadness. The southern California wildfires in 2025 renewed the trauma. Disasters like these are all too common. Hurricanes, earthquakes, floods, mudslides, . . . the too long list of disasters that can strike affects countless lives. Whether we or loved ones are literally forced to try to survive them or we are viscerally affected, the pain is real. As lawyers, we can be called upon to play myriad roles in trying to recover from these disasters and to prevent them from happening again. The legal issues—from liability to insurance coverage to real estate and zoning, to community rights preservation, and beyond—can be interrelated and emotional, making them even more complex. How do lawyers navigate these issues and how can the rest of us prepare should we find ourselves needing to handle these kinds of matters?

- Nikki Adame-Winningham, Climate & Sustainability Lead Counsel, Pfizer (New York)
- Judy Lam, Maynard Nexsen PC (moderator)
- Others to be announced

10:40 AM Break

10:50 AM AI for Everyone – The Definitive Guide for Harnessing This Tool

We’ve all read the cautionary tales and heard the horror stories: AI hallucinating cases resulting in embarrassment (at best) for some lawyers and law firms. Let’s try to set aside what the New York Times has identified as “the uniquely American animosity toward artificial intelligence” and consider a rational and realistic assessment of AI in law. AI can be a useful tool that plenty of lawyers are using. Join us for a discussion about how to use AI in your practice, when to use it, where it is best applied, for what to look out, and the current and anticipated future for AI in law. How can lawyers who may not be “tech” lawyers best responsibly utilize, apply, and participate in any regulation of AI technology? How, as a profession, do we guide and advise our clients and ourselves?

- Sonja Carlson, Senior Corporate Counsel, Microsoft (Redmond)
- Janet J. Lee (Moderator), Partner, Banner Witcoff (Chicago)
- Glenn T. Melchinger, Partner, Denton’s (Honolulu)
